

ENGLAND'S POLO TEAM TO MAKE GAME TRY FOR CUP

Left to right: Captain Barrett, Major C. F. Hunter, Lord Wimborne and Captain Cheape. Despite the discouraging showing made by the Britishers in their practice games on the other side, it is believed that they will prove a dangerous combination when lined up against the Yankee defenders of the International cup on Meadowbrook Field, Long Island, next month.

WITH ONE EXCEPTION, HOWITZERS VOLUNTEER

Of 106 Artillerymen, 105 Prepared to Go Into Field for Foreign Service.

Immediately after arriving back at the armory and while the men were still in their wet and bedraggled uniforms, Captain W. M. Myers, of the Richmond Howitzers, yesterday afternoon took a poll of the command to learn how many men would volunteer for service outside of the United States, in the event that there is a call for volunteers. All told, officers and men, there were 105 present, and to Captain Myers' great gratification, 105 said that they would volunteer for foreign service if it were needed.

The poll was taken in accordance with instructions sent by Adjutant-General W. W. Sale to all commanding officers in the State. Recently an order was issued to all military commands immediately to pack their field equipment, so that there would be no delay if the President should issue a call to arms. With this order went instructions to the officers to take polls of their respective commands, and to forward the returns to the Adjutant-General's office. The Howitzers were among the first to respond, and the whole organization, with the exception of a company, is ready to volunteer.

Plans for the mobilization of State troops in Richmond have been made, and everything is in readiness for their coming. Medical inspection would take place at the home of every organization, and the men would be formally enlisted before being brought to Richmond, and each command would be recruited to war strength after arrival here. It is believed that every military command in the State would volunteer as an organization.

HEAVY RAINS IN TEXAS

Fall in Many Sections Said to Have Been Unprecedented.

Dallas, Texas, May 30.—Continued rain today over a large part of Texas is causing grave concern. In many places the rainfall is said to have been unprecedented. In South Texas a considerable area is inundated, and anxiety is felt as the water in the upper reaches of the Nueces, Brazos and Colorado Rivers moves toward the Gulf. In Houston, heavy rain has been reported, and the city is suffering from flooding. In Houston street car traffic has been seriously interrupted. More than fifteen inches of rain have been recorded at the Houston government weather office during May.

Danville Tobacco Report. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Danville, Va., May 30.—The auction sales of loose tobacco at the warehouses closed yesterday for the season, and will not resume until August 2, when the crop begins to be sold.

The total sales for the season will be reported in a day or two. There is very little doing in re-rod tobacco, and the sales reported are mainly of a retail character. The stocks held by dealers are very much smaller than usual at this season of the year. There is more loose tobacco being held by dealers, but not any considerable quantity. There has been a rather slow start in the season for a tobacco planting season, the consequence is that very little tobacco has been planted in the past few weeks. The planting has been completed in East Carolina and South Carolina. The situation is becoming serious.

STORM OF HAIL STOPS SERVICE

head a black cloud hung ominously, but all eyes were turned on the soldiers, and when the cloud burst, no one was prepared.

RICHMOND GRAYS BRAVELY FACE OUT THE STORM

The troops had hardly gotten well within the gates, and were just marching up the sharp incline to the reviewing stand when the rain came down. There were no few preliminary drops. It came in thick, heavy sheets, driven hard by a breeze which had followed in the wake of the storming clouds. As the members of the citizenry took to their heels, the soldiers bared themselves grimly to the storm, and continued marching as though they were not half blinded by the driving rain. The Blues event by the speaker's stand and never halted. They marched by and through the gate in the rear of the stand, splashing through the rain and mud to street cars, in which they returned to their armory. Major Price halted his men and the Richmond Grays and the signal corps remained until the exercises were called off. And it was the Grays who blew the bugle call over the Confederate graves. The Howitzers followed the cue of the Blues, and marched on immediately, though a detail of Howitzers remained to fire the usual salute over the dead.

With plumes bedraggled and hanging limp, their shoes full of water, and their uniforms sopped like sponges, the Grays marched as gallantly back as they had marched into the cemetery. Guns were held atrail to protect them as much as possible from the rain, but there was nothing else that could be protected, and if the men laughed and whistled as they plunged through the rain, it was because they were possessed of the same spirit which had made veterans and caused Memorial Day to be observed.

The rain will not injure the uniforms, though the men will be put to some expense to have them cleaned. But hundreds of women, garbed in their holiday attire, will mourn ruined dresses and hats and pretty shoes, for not one of them had on a dry stitch when they fled so wildly from the cemetery. At first the crowd was quiet, but the humor of the situation broke on the people, and when they looked at each other's bedraggled, sloppy, skin-tight clothes, they began to laugh. They tried no longer to keep under shelter, but braved the elements, and waited patiently for the street cars to take them home.

EXERCISES ARE HELD

The memorial services at the National Cemetery, held under the auspices of Phil Kearney Post, G. A. R., failed not so badly, for they were held in the morning. After prayer and a hymn and an original poem, "The Rustic Baptonet," by Miss Isora DeWolf, Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Commander James D. Prentiss. The memorial address was delivered by J. C. Lathrop, and the exercises ended with the blowing of taps.

Dabney Memorial Day Orator.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Charlottesville, Va., May 30.—The orator at the annual Memorial Day exercises held at the cemetery at the University of Virginia was Professor Richard Heath Dabney, dean of the graduate school of the university and head of the history department of that institution. With Dean William M. Thornton, of the engineering department of the university, he was also presented with a Confederate cross of honor. Others who received crosses were: Veterans—Charles E. Via, P. M. Via, Edward S. Mooney, I. H. Worsham, and J. M. Murphy. Widows of descendants—Mrs. Eliza Lee Lacy, Mrs. Charles Wesley Cline, Mrs. J. D. Braxton, and Josephine Dickerson, Mrs. Margaret L. H. Lacy, Miss Mary Southall.

Address Made by Hulsey.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Lynchburg, Va., May 30.—Confederate memorial exercises were held here this afternoon, a parade of the local military organization, Confederate organizations, citizens and the apparatus of the fire department going to the soldiers' section in the Methodist cemetery, where former State Senator Don P. Hulsey delivered the memorial address.

Lacy Delivers Address.

Raleigh, N. C., May 30.—State Treasurer B. H. Lacy this afternoon delivered an address on Abraham Lincoln to United States and Confederate veterans in the national cemetery here. A picked choir from the city churches and the Confederate drum corps rendered music.

U. C. V. Exercises in Chicago.

Chicago, May 30.—The United Confederate Veterans here to-day held exercises out of respect to the 6,000 Confederate soldiers and sailors who died at Camp Douglas.

Fleet Observes Memorial Day.

Vera Cruz, May 30.—Memorial Day was observed by the American fleet with special services on account of the men who lost their lives when Vera Cruz was occupied by the American marines and bluejackets. A tribute to the American dead was paid by all the foreign war ships, which lowered their colors to half-mast. The garrison flags on shore also floated at half-mast and a salute was fired at noon.

WORK OF IDENTIFICATION EXCEEDINGLY DIFFICULT

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Rimouski, Que., May 30.—Piled in tiers in two crowded pier sheds, 200 dead unidentified bodies lie unidentified here to-night, grim evidence of the Empress of Ireland disaster. The work of identification is slow and exceedingly difficult, the bodies are piled so close together, and not more than twelve have been claimed.

Side by side with the bent forms of grimy stokers, silk clad women with ears and fingers bearing costly gems, are stretched. Little children are reposing peacefully as if asleep, while the faces of scores of men and women are distorted with expressions of the horror and fear that held them as they were plunged to their deaths.

Additional corpses are expected with the arrival of the government steamers from Liverpool and Europa, which have been searching for bodies since yesterday. Pent up in the riven hull of the lost steamer, or floating down the icy St. Lawrence, must be two bodies for every one resting here.

Dozens of the recovered victims are entirely unclad, while the majority are clothed only in the few scant garments in which they slept when the alarm rang out. There are not enough shrouds available, and, by far, the greater number of bodies lie as they were picked out of the water. The identifications thus far made came in a rough way, sometimes by jewels worn by the victims and sometimes by papers found in seasonable wallets. Around one man's neck was a little purse containing a number of pulpy money order receipts. The money had gone to his mother in a far village in Russia. He was on his way to visit her when the accident happened.

"Rastus, make it two!"

"An' make it wid dat 'Cream of Kentucky' 'THEE' whiskey. Dat wot de Kunnel say!"

After all, they haven't succeeded in improving on the old-fashioned whiskey cocktail. Many weird concoctions are called cocktails. But a lump of ice, a bit of sugar, a piece of lemon peel, and a figger of leave nothing to be desired, unless you think a dash of bitters will add to the delectable harmony.

Of course, if you insist, we'll let you use whiskey and a little Italian Vermouth and call it a "Manhattan," but Cream of Kentucky is too good to insult by much mixing. "THEE" Whiskey has all the flavor anybody needs—you don't have to add anything to make it delicious. The sugar of the grain is in it, and the flavor and bouquet are age-ripened, natural qualities. It is made in the old-fashioned, honest way, and mellowed by long, warm, sleepy years in the wood before bottling.

WHISKEY COCKTAIL—(A Bar Glass)—Three fourth glass of Cream of Kentucky, 1 or 2 dashes of Angostura bitters, 1 or 2 dashes of Vermouth, and 1 wing of lemon peel. Stir well. Strain into cocktail glass. Twist a piece of lemon peel on top.
